AKAMU collaborated with mentors to develop a secondary business line and integrate it into its financial projections, strengthening its growth strategy and long-term sustainability.

"This process undoubtedly allowed me to gain new personal knowledge. The first two connection sessions with AKAMU were highly valuable lessons, where Diego patiently answered all our questions and also taught us about the importance of his company, using very clear statistical and scientific references. The knowledge I gained was very useful to me, since in my day-to-day role, getting to know AKAMU gave me a point of reference to suggest dry toilets in future sustainability plans for companies in the Mining segment. We had more than ten meetings where AKAMU's team's commitment to continuous improvement, their listening attitude, and their humility truly motivated me to stay connected to the project."

"Having the opportunity to learn about new innovations in environmental sustainability undoubtedly broadens our perspective, it shows that we can do things differently from what we're used to. It's a big challenge, but it's certainly part of the seed that must be planted for future generations. AKAMU is a great initiative with full potential in Colombia, and I hope soon around the world as well. Its leaders have a clear purpose: to plant the foundations for a better future. We had the opportunity to teach and learn at the same time, striving to think outside the box in order to build stronger foundations for this magnificent project."
